Dear Ann,

I have some exciting news to tell you. So, today was a very special day for us, because we had a language marathon. Basically we were studying, but in an unusual way.

We started the day in the computer classroom and at first we were writing down questions for the quiz about sports and Europe in different languages. After that, the teacher said, that we must create a game for learning German. Mine and my partner's game was a success and we enjoyed playing it.

After that, two ladies have entered the room and there was a dead silence. The teacher introduced them to us and we found out they were volunteering. One of them was from Bulgaria and the other one was from Poland. That was the moment when the day got interesting. I am a very curious person and I always want to learn new things so I joined the Bulgarian class. At first it was very funny, because I didn't know a single word in Bulgarian, but later on, I found out that it is very similar to Croatian, because it's a Slavic language. We filmed ourselves talking Bulgarian and the tape was great.

Later on, we were doing some German exercises and we wrote two composition about multiculturalism. I really think that the day was awesome and I wish we could have more of them.

And what about you? Do you have anything similar on your school? Let me know about it.

Hope to see you soon!

How multiculturalism affects our lives

In today's world, multiculturalism often makes an appearance. It is almost impossible to find a place where there are only two or less cultures. The free world that we live in gives us the option to openly change locations which has plenty of benefits but some disadvantages as well. While some might be bringing great value to our lives, some others are a potential threat and we should be aware of the risks.

Multiculturalism has many positive aspects. But we aren't really aware of them, because they're already involved in our daily life. For example, you can learn about other cultures, religions and their traditions, that you might find interesting. You can learn new languages, which are going to expand your »horizon«, hence it is a great way to get some new experiences. Or if we take a look of your meals, I'm sure you at least occasionally afford a pizza, fast-food or Chinese, etc. Those are all foods derived from other cultures. But the most important thing you can learn from multiculturalism is how to be respectful and tolerant to other people. That way you can understand others and their backgrounds, therefore live in a peaceful, happy and connected community.

One of the negative aspects is that cultural differences can divide a society. This can lead to prejudices and discrimination towards minorities. There will always be people who think that their religion and culture is superior and the best one and that other beliefs and cultures are wrong. These people try to blame ethnic minorities for social and economic problems even when it is not true. Different opinions like that often lead to war.

What makes you think learning a new language would benefit me?

Language is something that lets us communicate with each other. Thousands of years ago, humans used to communicate with mere humbles, grunts, body language and other sounds. But as years passed, it has evolved into hundreds of more very diverse languages drastically different from one another.

My first language is Slovene. It's a language that I was raised by by my family. It's a language that makes me feel at home and welcoming. My second language is English. I've been learning it since I was 6 years old. It's the second language that I am most fond off. For some unknown reason, I feel more calm, open and self-conscious when I use it compared to Slovene.

The third language that I speak is German. I understand some of it, mostly because I am fond of the commonly used German words in the dialect of the Zasavje region in Slovenia. It is funny how much of an impact the fast-spreading English language has had on me and society. I often forget the Slovenian version for an expression, but I know the English version. I have to think really hard in order to remember it. The use of English expressions amongst the youth is getting more frequent by the day, be it the influence of television, videogames, pop culture, books or the internet. In my opinion it is good, but also bad in a way that gradually sets the individual's first language to the side.

I am very happy to have started learning English at such a young age. It allowed me to develop the British English accent that I have and I am really proud of it. It's easier, for me at least, to speak in the British accent instead of in the American accent.

Recent times have really made an impact on me as a person, certain events in recent memory have fundamentally changed my desires and goals relating to foreign languages. An unprecedented desire to get more personal with as many languages as I am able to has been awoken inside me. I believe I know how.

After learning that I will again be attending the same year of high school for not being a student that was required of me, I was met with a choice of a variety of mandatory free to choose classes. I picked French class. I thought to myself: »Eh, what the heck. Could be worth a try.«. After attending the first few classes I grew to love French, and it shows through the constant keeping up with newly acquired knowledge and strengthening that knowledge the very same day I've received it. I want to continue with gradually upgrading and building on my linguistic skills.

In my opinion, learning a new language at a young age is essential for every child in the world. It makes you more confident, at least in my case. The practice of learning a new language helps us towards improving certain cognitive skills like are memory for example. It allows me to say things that I would be too shy or afraid to tell in Slovene. It opens completely new and versatile paths for the individual, albeit one might not realise it in the beginning.

Up to this point, the passion for languages has been evolving into a belief, that this is really the path that I want to take in my short time on this plane of existence. It is the path, that I want to forge for myself.

Last but not least learning a second language is a great way to meet new people and make friends. Knowing people from different cultures add up to your overall sophistication which makes you smarter and you feel less scared of living abroad. In conclusion being able to talk multiple languages can help you in many practical ways therefore you don't feel you are cramming for nonsense exams. Opening yourself up to the rest of the world, where you not only have a palette of different job opportunities but also help you socialise more easily.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Every language has its own way of saying words. With them we talk, sing, learn and do many more things. But not every country has its own language, they use for example German, French or in some countries even more than one... Speaking more than one language is now just a regular thing and almost needed. For example our parents learned Srbo-croatian and English, now us, the younger generations are learning alongside English as a first foreign language also German or French or Spanish...

Learning foreign languages can be very good and useful. For example we can talk with other people who do not speak or understand Slovenian. That can be also needed if you are a sportsman or sportswoman because every competition out of the country will have you talking to people who are not familiar with how you speak. Without that you have no chance of being successful in other countries. If you decide to take a vacation anywhere else other than your own county, speaking English will be very useful for sightseeing and communicating with people who are also staying there. Knowing any other language can open doors to a lot of good and successful things. You can study in other countries or get a job that can be very successful. So learning languages can be a very good thing.

For those who don't know who that is you're probably not aware of the movie the Lord of the Rings or The Hobbit. He is known for including constructed languages, like Elvish, which was a made up language. But the Guinness world record for speaking the most number of languages is Ziad Fazah Who speaks 58 languages including Arabic, Polish, Thai and so on...

Learning more than one language comes with a lot of perks or advantages if you prefer. You'll have an edge when traveling the world, you'll discover a sense of connection with local cultures and histories, you'll develop a better memory, you'll keep your brain healthy. Our minds and brains are powerful and you can learn and speak as many languages as you want, as long as you keep your head in the game and you don't give up!

Kocka 1

Kocka je osnova vsega:
Živimo v kockah, učimo se
o kockah, spimo na kocki in sanjamo o kockah.

Zato jemljemo kocko brez c-ja
in druge kockaste zadeve, da
se nam skocka in za kratek
čas naše kozje oči vidijo tudi krogle
in piramide.

A kockam ne moremo ubežati,
saj na koncu vsi pristanemo v
v kockah globoko pod zemljo.

L'APPRENTISSAGE DES LANGUES EST UTILE

L'apprentissage des langues étrangères présente de multiples avantages. Je pense que c'est amusant d'apprendre de nouvelles langues parce que vous devenez intéressant pour les gens.

L'apprentissage de nouvelles langues est important surtout si vous devez voyager autour du monde à cause du travail. En voyageant à travers le monde, vous avez l'occasion de rencontrer de nouvelles personnes et d'apprendre davantage sur d'autres cultures. Je pense qu'une personne qui parle beaucoup de langues est attrayante pour beaucoup de gens.

Mais il y a aussi un côté négatif dans l'apprentissage de nouvelles langues. Apprendre des langues est difficile et cela demande beaucoup de temps. Il est important de définir son objectif et de l'atteindre. Mais si vous croyez en vous-même, vous pouvez apprendre une nouvelle langue en un an.

Mais il y a des gens qui n'aiment pas les autres cultures et religions. Je ne soutiens pas les gens comme ça et je pense que c'est faux.

L'APPRENTISSAGE DES LANGUES EST UTILE

La langue in/connue

On parle la langue inconnue.

Je ne connais pas cette langue.

On parle cette langue le matin, le midi, le soir et la nuit.

Je ne connais pas bien la langue.

On parle la langue tous les jours

et j'écoute cette langue tous les jours.

Aujourd'hui, je connais cette langue

et

on parle la langue commune.

Je voudrais un monde multicultural

et

voilà le début.
